

LEGISLATIVE ANALYST REPORT

To: Supervisor McGoldrick, Chair, City Operations and Neighborhood Services Committee
From: Shauna Johnson and Keith V. Lucas, Office of the Legislative Analyst
Date: July 10, 2006
Re: Elections and Voter Turnout (BOS File No. 060707) (OLA No. 045-06)

SUMMARY OF REQUESTED ACTION

Supervisor McGoldrick requested that the Office of the Legislative Analyst research City and County of San Francisco elections from 1996 to 2005, particularly municipal elections, including: election costs, voter turnout, number of ballot measures (propositions and referendums), and offices up for election in even and odd years. Additional questions were raised regarding special elections, historic voter turnout trends, and the impact of long ballots on voter response and turnout.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Using data from the Department of Elections, this paper makes the following findings:

1. Only five local offices are elected in non-general elections: Mayor, City Attorney, City Treasurer, District Attorney, and Sheriff;
2. San Francisco voter registration has increased over the past forty years, but turnout rates have generally declined;
3. Voter turnout is higher in even-year than in odd-year elections;
4. Initiative or recall petitions, as well as Board of Supervisors action, can trigger special elections;
5. Ballot measures are just as likely in odd as in even years;
6. San Francisco election costs have risen significantly over the past ten years;
7. Election costs could fall by $26.2M over twenty years by consolidating municipal elections with general elections;
8. Ballot length has no noticeable effect on ballot completion; and
9. Ballot length has no noticeable effect on voter turnout.

FINDINGS

Types of Elections

The City holds five types of elections - general, primary, municipal, run-off, and special elections. Since 1996 there have been 22 election cycles, including 5 general elections, 5 primary elections, 4 municipal elections, 5 municipal run-off elections, and 3 special elections. See Appendix A for a summary of each election, type of office, and outcome.

General elections occur every two years (during even-numbered years) and can include federal, state, and local offices. A primary election is a nominating election in which political parties choose a candidate. Primary elections generally occur during the same year as general elections and the winning candidates from each party face each other in the general election. Municipal elections also occur every two years (during odd-numbered years), but only include local offices and measures. Run-off elections occur during municipal election cycles when no candidate for an office obtains the majority of the votes. This results in a run-off election between the two highest scoring contenders. Special elections are those that are not regularly scheduled, and are typically held between general elections to fill a vacancy.

In March 2002, San Francisco voters passed Ranked-Choice Voting (Proposition A). Ranked-choice voting, also known as “instant run-off voting,” eliminates the need for separate run-off elections by allowing voters to rank up to three candidates for each office. With ranked-choice voting, if a candidate receives a majority of the first-choice votes cast for that office, that candidate will be elected. However, if no candidate receives a majority of the first-choice votes cast, an elimination process will begin. The candidate who received the fewest first-choice votes will be eliminated and each vote cast for that candidate will be transferred to the voter’s next-ranked choice among the remaining candidates. This elimination process continues until one candidate receives a majority and is declared the winner. Ranked-choice voting was implemented for the first time in the November 2004 general election.

Finding 1: Only Five Local Offices Are Elected in Non-General Elections

Elections occur in both even- and odd-numbered years, and San Francisco has had at least one election cycle every year since at least 1966. In general, municipal elections occur in odd-numbered years and state and federal elections occur in even-numbered years. San Francisco local elections held in odd years consist of the offices of Mayor, City Attorney, City Treasurer, District Attorney, and Sheriff. The offices of Mayor, District Attorney, and Sheriff are held together (in odd-numbered years that precede the U.S. presidential election), and the offices of City Attorney and City Treasurer are held together in alternating, odd years. (See Appendix B for a list of past Mayors of San Francisco).

Local elections held in alternating even years include the offices of Board of Supervisors, Assessor-Recorder, Public Defender, Board of Education, and Community College Board. Table 1 shows the offices that are up for election during even- and odd-numbered years.

Finding 2: Voter Registration Trends Upward, But Turnout has Declined

As elsewhere, San Francisco voter registration has generally increased over time with population increases and spiked upward during U.S. presidential election years. However, voter turnout has demonstrated a general downward trend over the last 40 years, most notably from 1966 through 1995. Figure 1 below shows San Francisco voter registration and turnout over the past forty years.

Source: San Francisco Department of Elections

Appendix C contains two maps that illustrate variation across neighborhoods in voter registration and turnout for the November 2005 election.

Finding 3: Voter Turnout is Higher in Even-Year Elections

From 1966 through 2005, voter turnout has generally been significantly higher for general elections than for municipal, primary, or special elections. Presidential elections recorded an average turnout of 70%, whereas gubernatorial elections recorded an average turnout of 61% and municipal elections recorded an average of 49%. Voter turnout has ranged from a low of 16.58% in the December 2001<sup>1</sup> run-off election for City Attorney to a high of 82.02% in the November 1968 presidential election. This relationship was maintained during the most recent decade, 1996 through 2005, albeit at lower turnout levels across the board. During this period presidential elections attracted turnout of 68%, gubernatorial elections 54%, and municipal elections 38%.

Table 2 below provides additional detail on voter turnout over time. Note that most election types have experienced a consistent decline in turnout over the period reviewed, with the decline in municipal turnout the most dramatic. Appendices D and E contain additional detail on voter turnout from 1966 to 2005.

Finding 4: Many Mechanisms can Trigger Special Elections

The San Francisco Municipal Elections Code and Charter govern special municipal elections.<sup>2</sup> A special election may occur in one of several ways<sup>3</sup>:

- When a measure qualifies by initiative petition, the Board may call a special election to consider that measure;
- The City is required to hold a special election if an initiative petition contains enough signatures and the petition calls for a special election;

<sup>1</sup> This is likely explained by the fact that the election was small - a runoff for City Attorney only, which had a 75,267 turnout with a Citywide eligible voter population.

<sup>2</sup> City and County of San Francisco Charter, Sections 13.103, 14.101, 14.102, and 14.103.

<sup>3</sup> State law also allows school boards, college boards, and special district boards to call special elections for taxes, bonds, or advisory measures. Also, the State may call a special election for measures or for a vacancy in Congress or the State Legislature, per Divisions 9 and 10 of the California Elections Code.

- The Board of Supervisors may call a special election if a referendum petition is submitted with enough signatures to suspend the effective date of an ordinance approved by the Board; and
- The City is required to hold a special election if a recall petition with enough signatures is submitted.

The Board of Supervisors also has the authority to consolidate a special election with a general municipal or statewide election. Since 1996 the City has had three special elections, two statewide (November 2005 and October 2003) and one municipal (June 1997).

Finding 5: No Significant Difference Exists in the Number of Ballot Measures in Odd and Even Years

From 1996-2005, 168 local ballot measures have come before the San Francisco voters. Table 3 is a summary of the ballot measure results from 1996 to 2005. Of the 22 elections held during this period, 16 elections contained local ballot measures. None of the five run-off elections contained ballot measures, nor did the October 2003 special election. Generally, November elections contained more measures than March or June elections. There was not a significant difference between the average number of ballot measures in even years (11) compared to odd years (10). For more detailed information regarding local ballot measures see Appendix F.

Finding 6: Election Costs Have Risen Significantly

Over the past 10 years, an annual average of approximately $8.6 million has been appropriated to the Department of Elections. From FY1995-96 through FY1998-99 appropriations were fairly stable. However, in FY1999-00 election appropriations more than doubled from the previous year, and nearly doubled again in FY2000-01. During FY2003-04, appropriations were again significantly higher compared to other years. According to the Department of Elections (DoE), appropriations were high during this time because four elections were held that fiscal year.<sup>5</sup> For FY2004-05, $2,451,000 was appropriated specifically to implement instant run-off voting. Information related to the specific cost per election was not readily available from DoE. Table 4 is a summary of the DoE budget appropriations for the past decade and includes the average appropriation per election.<sup>6</sup>

Table 4: Department of Elections Appropriations from FY1995-96 to FY2004-05

Finding 7: Department of Elections Model Estimates Cost Savings of Converting to Consolidated Elections of $26.2 Million Over 20 Years

The Department of Elections estimated the City’s election costs over the next twenty years under the current structure for odd- and even-year elections. They also estimated the election costs under a hypothetical scenario in which odd-year municipal elections were eliminated by consolidating them into even-year general elections. The cost factors for this model include:

Variable Costs	Fixed Costs
Temporary salaries	Poll-workers
Temporary overtime	Polling place rentals
Temporary benefits	Sheriff and Department of Parking and Traffic staff
The cost of ballot cards	Materials and supplies
Voter information pamphlet (VIP) printing
VIP layout and translation costs

This model does not account for inflationary cost increases. Based on the consolidated model, DoE estimated that the City could save at least $26.2 million over a period of 20 years.

<sup>5</sup> Elections held in fiscal year 2003-04 include October 7, 2003, November 4, 2003, December 9, 2003, and March 2, 2004.

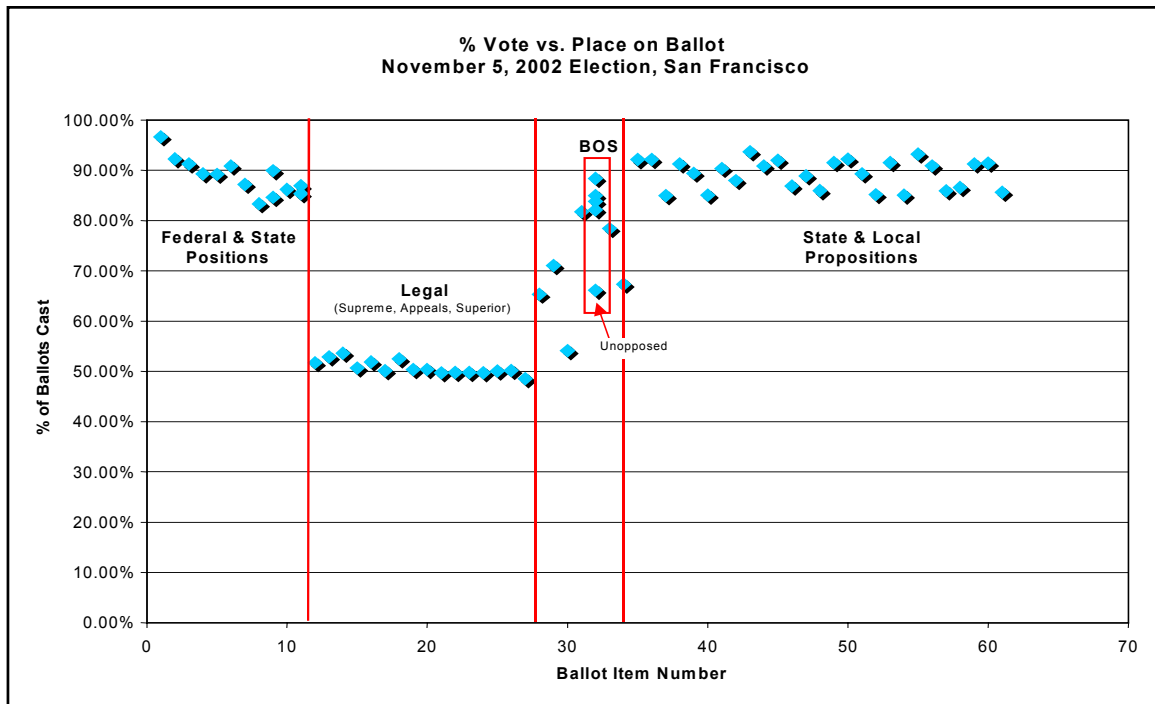

<sup>6</sup> According to the Department, in 2000 the City acquired a new voting system and migrated from small punch-card ballots to larger/heavier optical scan ballots. This necessitated a precinct-based count with new equipment, which significantly increased the cost of elections. Increases in 2002 can be partially attributed to a change in law for permanent absentee voters – the City went from having under 10,000 to over 120,000 permanent absentee voters. In 2002 the Board of Supervisors also passed an ordinance to pay for the return postage of absentee ballots. Proposition E also took affect, which created the Election Commission and prohibited City employees from helping the Department with elections.

Finding 8: Ballot Length Has No Noticeable Effect on Ballot Completion

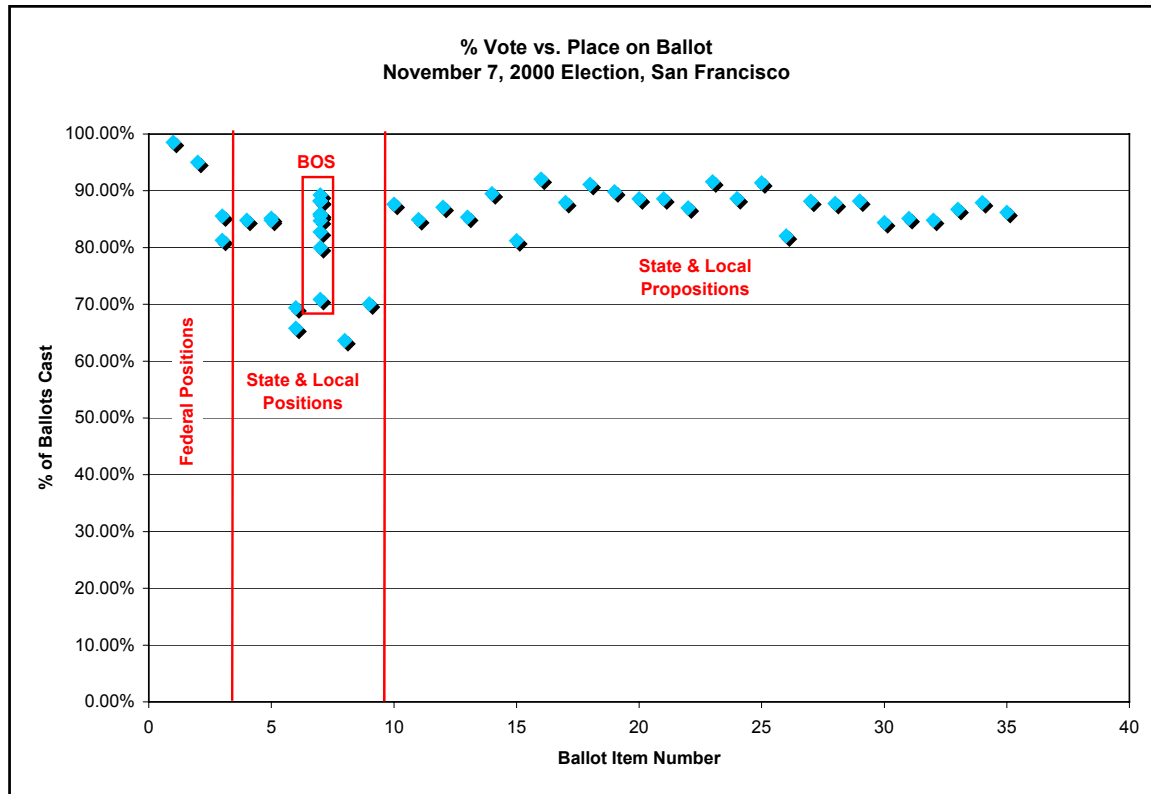

The OLA looked at the three longest ballots (determined by the number of items) from 1996-2005 to determine the effect of ballot length on voter response (see Figures 2-4). The figures show the percentage of ballot holders who voted for each ballot item in the San Francisco elections of November 5, 2002, November 7, 2000, and November 3, 1998. The number of items on the three ballots ranged from approximately 35 to 60, and items were generally placed in the following order: federal positions, State positions, local positions, and State and local propositions.

The State and local proposition portion of the ballot, which appears at the end of the three ballots examined, generally did not show any statistically significant deviation from a flat line – the evidence strongly suggests that voter response is constant. Additionally, the average proposition response percentage is on par with the beginning portion of the ballot. We thus conclude that voters did not show any signs of “voter fatigue” in these three elections (for the given metric of response percentage of ballot holders).

Finding 9: Ballot Length Has No Noticeable Effect on Voter Turnout

The following figure shows the effect of ballot length on voter turnout (the percentage of registered voters who went to the polls) for San Francisco elections from November 1995 through November 2005.

Based on statistical analysis, a study of the figure, and an understanding of the ballots, we make the following observations:

1. Run-off elections have the shortest ballots (1 or 2 items) and the widest variation in turnout, ranging from 17% to 54%. For both of these reasons, we do not believe that run-off elections should be included in an analysis to determine the effect of ballot length on voter turnout.
2. Excluding run-off elections, ballot length from November 1995 through November 2005 does not show a statistically significant effect on voter turnout, negatively or positively.
3. The top four elections in terms of turnout from November 1995 through November 2005 were the 2003 recall and the three presidential elections.
