Be it ordained by the People of the City and County of San Francisco:

Section 1. Findings.

(a) Since 1997, the City and County of San Francisco and Pacific Gas & Electric Co. ("PG&E") have engaged in an ambitious program to underground utility poles in over 50 miles of public rights-of-way.

(b) Under PG&E Electrical Tariff Rule 20A, PG&E may use ratepayer money to underground the electrical facilities on streets that have been legislated by the City that:

(i) have an unusual heavy concentration of overhead electric facilities; (ii) are extensively used by the general public and carry a heavy volume of pedestrian or vehicular traffic; (iii) adjoin or pass through a civic area or public recreation area or an area of unusual scenic interest to the general public; or (iv) are part of a public street improvement. PG&E can also use Rule 20A funds to underground legislated underground districts where PG&E is replacing gas pipelines.

(c) As the Board of Supervisors determined when it legislated these districts, undergrounding the utility facilities there is in the public interest.

(d) As part of the undergrounding program, PG&E, along with other utilities including AT&T and Comcast, must bring the newly undergrounded utility facilities to within one foot of the building on the property. Property owners are responsible for the costs of bringing the newly undergrounded utilities to the building on the property.

(e) For the most part, property owners have cooperated with the City. They have hired licensed electrical contractors to install the necessary facilities.

(f) However, in undergrounding districts throughout the City certain property owners have ignored orders issued by the Director of Public Works to complete the necessary work. In many cases, this failure is not due to lack of financial resources. The Mayor's Office of Housing has grants available to qualifying low-income households to offset these costs.

(g) Of the 8,524 properties in the 74 underground districts that are part of the City's undergrounding program, more than 5,114 property owners have installed these facilities either at their own expense or with funds obtained from the Mayor's Office of Housing Utility Underground Grant Program. The remaining 3,410 property owners have failed to complete the required work as specified by the Director. While most of these property owners have begun the work and will likely complete it, the Department of Public Works ("Department") estimates that 300 property owners have refused even to begin the work and are unlikely to respond to further demands from the Department.

(h) Because these properties are not ready to receive utility services from the newly undergrounded facilities, PG&E is unable to complete the undergrounding project in the districts where these properties are located by cutting service over to the underground facilities and removing the existing utility poles. This is a nuisance to other property owners in the districts, who have suffered the inconvenience of the undergrounding work and incurred the expense to ready their properties.

(i) Under existing law, the Director has certain remedies against a property owner that fails to comply with a Director’s order to perform the required construction including:

(i) removing the existing overhead utility facilities; and (ii) completing the required work and assessing the costs on the property.

(j) The Director has never ordered the poles to be removed, despite the refusal of one or more property owners in a district, because properties without underground facilities would lose their utility services. The Director has also never completed the required work because the Department had determined that to do so would require the Department to enter the building on the property, which the Department could not do without the property owner’s permission or a court order.

(k) Recently the Department, working with PG&E and the Department of Building Inspection, has determined that the work could be completed without entering the building on a property.

(l) PG&E is willing to do this work for the City, but PG&E cannot use Rule 20A funds for this purpose.

(m) The Department has the funds available and is willing to fund this work. The Department intends to enter into an agreement with PG&E to establish the terms and conditions under which PG&E will do this work for the City.

(n) Under the legislation, the City would declare these properties a public nuisance. As a result, and in accordance with California Government Code Section 38873.5, the City could impose a special assessment on the properties to obtain reimbursement from the property owner for funds expended by the Department. The assessment would include all of the City's costs for abating the nuisance.

(o) The legislation also contains certain other amendments to Article 18 of the Public Works Code. Article 18 was added to the Public Works Code in 1972 and was last amended in 1984. This legislation contains technical amendments to certain sections in Article 18 because these sections are out-of-date due to changes to various City laws.
