8 WHEREAS, breast milk is the optimal and only food an infant needs during the first six 9 months of life and continues to be an important source of nutrients for at least the first year of 10 life; and

11 WHEREAS, breastfeeding has positive effects on the health of infants and mothers and 12 therefore contributes to the overall public health status of the community; and,

13 WHEREAS, breastfeeding benefits society as a whole by strengthening the bonds 14 shared by mothers and infants, and is also an important part of preventative health care, 15 providing mothers with short and long term benefits, including decreased risk of breast and 16 ovarian cancer; and,

17 WHEREAS, compelling scientific evidence indicates that human milk is unique in that it 18 provides infants with optimum growth and development, protection against specific infections 19 and allergies, and positive long-term effects on their health and well-being; and,

20 WHEREAS, only a small fraction of San Francisco's infants receive the many benefits 21 of breastfeeding throughout their first year of life, despite this being the recommended ideal;
22 now, therefore, be it
