Resolution supporting California State Senate Bill No. 690, introduced by Senator

WHEREAS, Despite often occurring behind closed doors, domestic violence is all too common for Californians with 34.9% of women and 31.1% of men experiencing intimate partner violence or stalking in their lifetime (NCBI); and

WHEREAS, Statistics indicate that between 2016 and 2018, domestic violence cases increased by more than 42% in California, while about half of all domestic violence cases continue to go unreported (NCBI); and

WHEREAS, In 2022, there were more than 162,000 domestic violence calls to law enforcement in California; and

WHEREAS, Survivors of domestic violence often face significant barriers in reporting their abuse, including fear of retaliation, trauma, financial dependency, and social stigma, which can delay their ability to come forward; and

WHEREAS, Research indicates that the recovery process for survivors of domestic violence is prolonged, often taking several years for victims to heal sufficiently to report their abuse; and

WHEREAS, According to the National Institutes of Health, the trauma from domestic violence can have lasting effects, with many survivors needing extensive time to overcome their fear and emotional scars to seek justice and support (NCBI); and

WHEREAS, Current statute of limitations laws in California may prevent justice from being served in many cases of domestic violence, as the current five-year limitation is insufficient for many survivors to come forward; and

WHEREAS, SB 690, proposed by Senator Rubio, seeks to extend the statute of limitations for prosecuting domestic violence from five years to 15 years, providing survivors with a more realistic and supportive timeframe to report their abuse and seek legal recourse; and

WHEREAS, Extending the statute of limitations would align legal timelines with the reality of survivors' recovery processes, thereby enhancing the chances of holding perpetrators accountable and delivering justice to more victims; and

WHEREAS, The fiscal implications of this bill, including increased costs for court proceedings and potential incarceration, are justified by the anticipated increase in justice served and the societal benefits of addressing domestic violence more effectively; now, therefore, be it
